It's going to be hard justifying your diet this weekend.

Four food festivals in Miami-Dade have something for everyone who loves to eat (ie., everyone) and looking for things to do in Miami. There are events for plant-based food lovers, for those in the western cities and even for the throwbacks who just love hot dogs and Rock 'n' Roll.

Pack your Pepto and pick your poison.

Seed Food and Wine

Seed Food and Wine is plant-based food festival for vegan and vegetarian diners.

For the past four years, the Seed Food and Wine festival has brought together plant-based chefs, vegan athletes, winos, foodies and writers.

This year, the nation's premier plant-based food and wine festival returns to Miami, offering five days of exhibitions and dining events ranging from a five-course celebrity chef dinner, to a 5K run, to a fashion show.

Tonight, a Plant-Based Burger Battle will pit chefs from across the nation against one another in the ultimate patty slam.

Wiener Bash with Vince Neil

The star is a hot dog and a hot dog is the star.

Get ready, because Magic City Casino and Burger Beast have partnered up to bring us the second annual Wiener Bash, a sausage fest of epic proportions, paired with a headlining performance by Mötley Crüe front man Vince Neil.

More than 20 local restaurants and food trucks will gather Saturday for Wiener Bash, a celebration of everybody’s favorite cylindrical meats as guests help themselves to unlimited hot dogs, sausages and sweet treats.
